ACFOA Human Rights Office East Timor Collection

Introductory note on box list

This listing is a preliminary guide to the contents of one of the most significant Australian, privately-held, non-government collections about East Timor, 1975-1999.

The collection is composed mainly of the original work files of Patrick Walsh, an internationally significant advocate for East Timorese self-determination. The bulk of this work was done under the auspices of the Australian Council for Overseas Aid (ACFOA - the peak representative body for Australian non-government aid and development agencies; now ACFID) through a specially established Human Rights Office in Melbourne.

The collection is a treasure chest of primary source materials on events inside East Timor during the Indonesian military occupation and a rich source of materials on Australian and international government and non-government actions on the issue.

The descriptive material in this document has been developed over several years by John Waddingham & Cecily Gilbert as part of the work of CHART. The listing remains in a preliminary state. The list is a simple unsorted box list - that is, the contents have been boxed and listed as found. A number of different filing systems have been left intact; many of the folders were in no particular order; many materials were uncontained and were roughly sorted into folders which were given meaningful titles. No attempt has yet been made to re-order the physical collection or the descriptive material for greater ease of access to researchers.

This version of the list is in two parts. The major leading section of the list describes that part of the collection held privately at a single site. Three smaller sections appended to the main list describe materials held at a separate location; named Attic (1), (2), (3).

A more complete and integrated list will be completed during 2011-12.
